

If someone is willing to pay for a service, why should that service be disallowed to provide value and quality to its subscribers? Is it not fair to be competitive? I understand the issue very well, but must side with XM not because I'm a subscriber, but because this is America.